ABOUT KERRIE

Kerrie joined the Navy early into her career and learned the elemental concepts related to creating reusable systems to more efficiently solve problems. She has since enjoyed applying those concepts to communications, business process, data integrations, sustainable construction practices, and information technology. For the past 15 years, she has worked with IT project management teams to find more effective and rewarding ways to streamline those practices. Now that the evolution of agile methodologies has formulated an entirely new set of ideas, she delights in the exploration of capitalizing on those ideas and improving all aspects of our professional and personal work systems.
