ABOUT THOMAS

Thomas began his career doing general clerical work in the training and testing division of the American Automobile Association. A lover of technology, he volunteered to test the viability of the intranet and internet for AAA and developed one of their first online training and testing programs. His love of website design eventually led him to website development, and from 2000 until 2008, Thomas worked as Senior Developer and Development Manager at Brintech. In 2008, he left Brintech to work as an independent consultant developing websites, content management systems, and other custom, database-driven web applications. In 2010, he joined OptaComp as the Solutions Lead for a number of internally developed and supported projects until he was promoted to Manager of Information Technology. AmTrust Financial acquired OptaComp some years later, and after successfully migrating OptaComp's IT systems and information to AmTrust Financial, Thomas joined DiCom Software as Technology Director. In this role, he is responsible for all software development initiatives.
