ABOUT MARK

Mark Campbell, CIO for the Atlanta Housing Authority, is a leading business and technology expert with over 14 years of experience in the development of high technology business solutions and strategic IT management. He has applied his expertise in a variety of markets, spanning four continents, and consistently meets and exceeds goals while overseeing every aspect of his diverse project portfolios, from design and implementation to marketing, maintenance and long term management.

As CIO for the Boston Public Health Commission, Mark was responsible for upgrading the technology infrastructure for the Health Commission which entailed replacing a legacy e-mail system, re-designing the WAN (Wide Area Network), implementing an intranet improving communications throughout various departments as well as replacing the telephone system with digital technology.

As Deputy CIO for the City of Atlanta, Mark managed every facet of the City's information technology infrastructure. He is directly responsible for resolving all technical issues, playing a critical role in strategic planning and operational standards aimed at improving the City's IT infrastructure capabilities and performance.

Prior to his position as Deputy CIO, Mark served as Director of Telecommunications for the City of Atlanta from 2006 to 2007, where he was responsible for the design, implementation, support and maintenance of the City's voice and data network. Committed to making cost-effective changes and improving performance in the network, he implemented cutting-edge technology that successfully reduced operating expenditures by more than $1 million.
