ABOUT GAIL

Gail is a technology leader, project manager, (PMP), Scrum Master, (CSM), MBA, with a proven record of successful implementations that satisfy customers, achieve goals, and improve business results. Gail poses superior analytic abilities that differentiate technology potential versus the business factors of cost, time to implementation, ongoing support, and customer acceptance. She also has an extensive experience in IT governance, security controls, project and portfolio management, and Agile development methodologies. Gail is known for being quick, decisive, a strategic thinker able to bring efficiency, scalability, and productivity to business processes and technology solutions. She creates dynamic performance in transforming existing operations, revitalizing teams and introducing new concepts. She also has a very solid understanding of technology environments, including telecommunications, data security, SaaS, and application development. Ultimately, Gail is a knowledge enthusiast, who stays informed about latest technology industry news, trends, products, services and relevant emerging technologies. Intellectually curious, but pragmatic. Gail graduated from Austin College with a degree in Communication Arts and Business Management. She also holds a MBA in Management of Information Systems from The University of Dallas.

WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY

"I have had the privilege of working with Gail since 2008 at The American National Bank of Texas. We have consulted with one another on many projects and respect her opinion and professionalism. It has been impressive to see the improvements in the IT Department under her Supervision."

"Gail is a partner in our risk management efforts. She is diligent in identifying risks and instrumental in determining the most cost effective approach to mitigate those risks. While Gail may not understand the line of business she will ask probing questions to ensure she understands the need or issue in order to provide her expertise and guidance on the subject matter. Gail is driven and in continual education mode to provide value to her customers with the latest in emerging technology and best solutions to make her customers successful."
