ABOUT JEFFREY

Jeffrey has been an IT professional since graduating from Campbell University in 1984. He has been a Software Developer, Independent Consultant, ScrumMaster, Systems Analyst and Software Development Manager. Jeffrey spent the first twelve years of his career working with manufacturing, local government, retirement plan record keeping and healthcare software as an employee with various companies. He then spent the next fifteen years working as an independent software consultant developing products and providing IT services for various customers. Circumstances guided him back to being an employee again where he has spent the last five years working in Agile Scrum and Kanban shops where he has had various roles. Currently, Jeffrey is the "Manager of Software Development" at the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency (NCHFA). He is responsible for leading three project teams (Scrum) and a production support team (Kanban). Jeffrey is also a firm believer in servant leadership, collaboration, partnering and relationship cultivation.

WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY

I have been told I "am the spirit of the team", "lead people to do their best" and "go above and beyond the call of duty". I've also been called a "goof ball" and a "clown". I believe the last two characteristics are spot on. I have doubts about the other accolades, but I do my best to serve the team!

PERSONAL SLOGAN: "TREAT OTHERS AS YOU WANT TO BE TREATED."
