ABOUT MICHAEL

Michael started his career in 1999 as part of Y2K project. For the first 8 years in IT, he held various positions that ranged from systems to network to development in financial institutions. Translating that effort, he focused his efforts in Information Security where he progressed from Security Analyst to Information Security Officer for one of the top 10 banks in North America.

Looking for some diversity, Michael joined IBM delivering security services for application development customer. In 2013, he decided to join Insurance Auto Auctions (IAA) as a security manager where Michael 'rebooted' the program. While continuing to deliver value, Michael left security to manage larger teams that provided a variety of services to IAA. He is currently an Application Development Director for their provider applications including all B2B services.

WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY

"Michael and I worked together at RR Donnelley on the IT Governance - Security team. He was always able to provide actionable security guidance and articulate creative solutions for complex situations. Michael is a talented, hard-working professional and a true team player."

"Mr. Ortega is a rare breed of leadership and technical acumen. He moves security forward as a business enabler - and finding solutions to mitigate risk that are effective. Michael can get deep and find application level vulnerabilities - as well as have the leadership to communicate with all levels of management to bring issues to resolution. Just one of many examples of the tools in his toolkit. It was a pleasure to work with Michael."

"Michael has in-depth knowledge and skill sets in the information technology security and overall system architecture. He is extremely personable and is able to successfully carried out his tasks on time within budget. He is always eager to help those in need of guidance. I highly recommend him."
