ABOUT CHELSEA

Chelsea Cooper, CSPO began her career in Michigan an ERP implementation specialist in the automotive industry. After the implementation phase of her project was complete, she moved into a permanent business analyst role where she was also responsible for continuous training and development. While in that role, she successfully created and implemented two disaster recovery and business continuity plans.

In 2015, Chelsea transitioned from automotive to healthcare when she and her family moved Michigan to Murfreesboro, Tennessee and she accepted a position as Business Analyst with HealthTrust. Now in her role at HealthTrust, Chelsea leads a remote team of three developers and 1 QA resource; all located in various areas of the country.

Chelsea graduated from Central Michigan University with a Bachelor of Applied Arts and Master of Arts in Interpersonal Communication. She wrote her Master's Thesis on the effects of self-monitoring and arrogance on the tendency to give unsolicited advice. Other top areas of interest include non-verbal communication, public speaking, small groups, and leadership.
