ABOUT CHRIS

Chris York began his career in Information Technology in 1997 when he joined the infrastructure team for a software company in the manufacturing process and instrumentation field. After ten years with that team, Chris moved to healthcare IT when he moved home to Nashville and took a position leading a team that supported EHR (electronic health records).

Chris was first introduced to Scrum in 2009 when he was named product owner on new development project. Over the last eight years, Chris has worked in various areas of Scrum, serving as a product owner, development manager, and a Scrum Master. Chris also holds the prestigious Certified Scrum Professional credential from the Scrum Alliance.
